SHEPHERD

Ex-prize fighter WILLIE DIXON has been called "the Godfather of the Blues" and has been one of the most prolific, and influential composer-musicians in modern music. When DIXON was six years old he composed his first tune which he called "The Signifying Monkey," and passed copies of it around the yard of his South Side Chicago grammar school. His school mates loved it, but its rather profane lyrics offended school officials. Years later the song was adapted and changed by Chuck Berry into a song he called "Jo-Jo Gunne" and even later the rock group Jo-Jo Gunne took their name from Berry's version of DIXON'S song.

Since composing "The Signifying Monkey," DIXON has writtem more songs than almost any other contemporary musician, and his songs have been recorded by a seemingly endless list of blues and rock musicians, both black and white. Among the many standard rock and blues tunes Willie has written are "Spoonful," "Hoochie Coochie Man," "Little Red Rooster," "I Just Want to Make Love to You," "Back Door Man," and "Wang Dang Doodle." And these same songs have been hit recordings for such artists as Muddy Waters, Howlin' Wolf, Chuck Berry, Sonny Boy Williamson, the Rolling Stones, Cream, the Doors and The Pointer Sisters.

The Point

Animated, Narrated by Dustin Hoffman
An enchanting fantasy of ageless import, "The Point" poignantly points out the pointlessness of ignorance, hypocrisy and prejudice, while telling the charming tale of a young boy named Oblio. Oblio lives in an unusual kingdom where everything and everyone is pointed—except for Oblio. But Oblio has many friends and is very happy—despite his rounded head—until an evil count, jealous that Oblio is more popular than his own son, banishes Oblio as an outcast of the pointed society. So Oblio is exiled, along with his faithful dog Arrow, to the Pointless Forest, where they encounter a number of fantastic experiences. From his adventures, Oblio learns that it is not at all necessary to be pointed to have a point in life. With delightful songs composed and performed by Harry Nilsson, this beautifully animated film provides an excellent opportunity for discussion, instruction, or simply charming entertainment.
